

BIONESS CORPORATE FACT SHEET

About Bioness Inc. Bioness is an innovative provider of neuromodulation products that aid individuals in the recovery from chronic central nervous system disorders such as stroke, multiple sclerosis, spinal cord injury, traumatic brain injury, and others. By fusing breakthroughs in technology with physical medicine and rehabilitation, Bioness is committed to providing patients with new levels of physical independence and productivity.

The company distributes two award winning non-invasive devices based on functional electrical stimulation (FES). The Ness L300™ System -- winner of the prestigious Gold 2007 Medical Design Excellence Award for its innovative form and function -- is clinically demonstrated to minimize the impact of foot drop in some patients, a condition caused by weakness of the muscles that can lead to instability and difficulty in walking. The award winning Ness H200™ System is designed to provide both functional and therapeutic benefit for some individuals with neurological disorders affecting the function of the arm and hand. In addition to bringing to market non-invasive solutions, the company is developing minimally invasive devices to address the needs of the rehab market.

Bioness was established in 2004 by three leaders in the field of medical technologies: entrepreneur and philanthropist Alfred E. Mann, NESS Ltd., and the Alfred E. Mann Foundation for Scientific Research. Alfred Mann has founded and financed numerous medical devices companies, including Pacesetter Inc. (now part of St. Jude), MiniMed Inc. (today part of Medtronic), and Advanced Bionics Corporation (a Boston Scientific Company), among many others.
